Evidence-Based Information Service Delivery : Oh Librarian, Where Art Thou?

8:00 a.m. - 5:00 p.m.

This course will provide librarians with the necessary understanding, skills and overview of resources to deliver evidence-based information to health care professionals. Participants will take part in discussions on developing partnerships with health professionals to create new modes of information delivery, and the evolving role of librarian as evidence-based information service provider. Librarians will gain a basic understanding of various levels of evidence and will be able to design search processes to retrieve them. A practical experience will provide participants the opportunity to develop or enhance the following skills: the literature search interview - getting to the answerable question, implementing evidence-based search strategies, packaging and delivering the search results. Based on their experience with the Family Practice Inquiries Network (FPIN), the instructors will discuss the skills needed to advance the librarian as a partner in information services development. The concept of the librarian as informationist will be explored. MLA CEU: 8 credits

Instructors:

Susan Meadows has served as medical librarian and adjunct assistant professor for the Department of Family and Community Medicine, University of Missouri – Columbia, for 10 years. She is responsible for providing a variety of information services in support of the department's clinical and research activities. Her areas of expertise are in database searching with a special emphasis on evidence-based medicine, and bibliographic file management systems. She currently serves as Librarian Team Leader for the Family Practice Inquiries Network (FPIN), a national, not-for-profit consortium of primary care health professionals whose mission is to provide evidence-based answers to physicians' questions at the point of care.

Deb Ward is the Vice President for Information Resources and Director of the J. Otto Lottes Health Sciences Library, University of Missouri - Columbia.

Marketing as if Your Library Depended on It

8:00 a.m. - 12:00 noon

Marketing is awareness and response: Awareness of the world from the customer's point of view and then responding with changes in service and communication. Learn how to improve your influence with middle and upper management, use marketing to create a strategic plan, bring in new (and "lost") customers (both internal and external to your institution), collect and evaluate quantitative and descriptive data and improve the effectiveness of promotional activities, even if you are a solo librarian. You will create a marketing project and present the results to your colleagues. For the second day version of the course, you will create and implement a marketing project at your library and present the results to your colleagues at the second day, which will be at least two months after the first program. Participants will receive an email and phone support from the instructor. Projects will be evaluated and information shared. MLA CEU: 4 credits

Instructor:

Pat Wagner has been working with libraries since 1978 as a consultant and trainer and is a frequent presenter and regional and national medical and special library conferences. She has a professional background in marketing and has developed several marketing programs specifically for the medical library community.

Clinicaltrials.gov and an Overview of the Drug Development Process

8:00a.m. - 12:00noon

In the United States, over 20 billion dollars are spent annually on drug development. Tens of thousands of individuals participate in the testing of drugs through clinical research studies. For many, participation is a way to help the scientific community; for some, it offers a chance to get a new potentially successful treatment. This four-hour course gives an overview of the drug development process in the United States and introduces attendees to several related government databases including Clinicaltrials.gov, Medwatch, the Orange Book, MAUDE and proprietary pipeline databases. MLA CEU: 4 credits

Instructor:

Toni Yancey, Outreach Coordinator for the National Network of Libraries of Medicine, has worked as a medical librarian for over ten years. She has spent the past five years educating health professionals about the products and services of the National Library of Medicine (NLM) by conducting training sessions throughout the Southeast and exhibiting at state and regional meetings of health care professionals and consumers.

Concepts in Infection Control

1:00p.m. - 5:00p.m.

This course is intended for health science librarians who wish to learn more about medicine to increase their effectiveness in providing information services to clinical staff. MLA CEUs: 4 credits pending

Instructor:

Julie Jefferson is the director of epidemiology & infection control at Rhode Island Hospital. Certified in infection control, she has held various leadership roles in the Association for Practitioners in Infection Control (APIC) and is a member of the National Nursing Honor Society. She has also been published in numerous trade publications including the New England Journal of Medicine and the American Journal of Epidemiology.

The Evolving Web : Search Engines, Browser Alternatives and Accessing the Deep Web

1:00p.m. - 5:00 p.m.

The course examines the changing role, and capabilities of the Web as a research tool. It will teach advanced Google searching, present alternative search engines, and take a look at where the state of the art in search engines is headed. The session will also explore alternative browsers with functions and how information from the deep web can be accessed. MLA CEU: 4 credits pending

Instructor:

Rob Favini, NELINET Consultant, Discovery Services, has extensive experience in reference services, searching tools and services including OCLC's FirstSearch, and library management. Prior to joining NELINET, Rob was the dean of libraries at Becker College in Worcester, MA. Rob holds a Masters of Library Science from Kent State Univeristy and a Masters of Business Administration from Bentley College. At NELINET, Rob has provided training in the areas of e-resource management and selection.

Tuesday, September 27

First Look: The Molecular Biology Resources from NCBI

1:00p.m. - 5:00p.m. Location: Hecker Room, Rockefeller Library, Brown University.

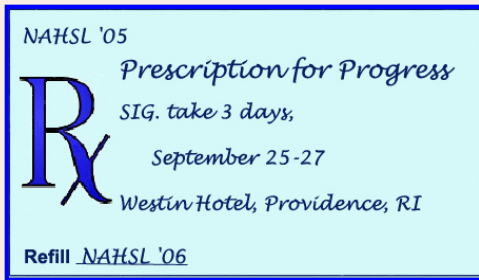

Class offered at NO CHARGE.

First Look will provide an introduction and overview to the NCBI Molecular Biology databases. The class will begin with a very brief introduction to molecular biology. Then, the course will concentrate on what information is available in which database, what a typical record looks like, and how to navigate the resource. Learn, too, what sorts of questions are answered by each database. And, finally, learn how these databases are interconnected. MLA CEU: 4 credits pending.

Instructor:

Donna Berryman is currently the Outreach Coordinator for the New England Region (NER) of the National Network of Libraries of Medicine (NN/LM) based out of the University of Massachusetts Medical School in Worcester, Massachusetts. As Outreach Coordinator, she spends most of her time traveling around New England, teaching librarians and health professionals how to use the resources that the National Library of Medicine makes freely available on the Web. Donna is a librarian who has worked in several different types of libraries: public, business and academic. She hold a BS in management from the University of Minnesota and an MLIS from Dominican University in Illinois.

Keynote Addresses

Delivering the Evidence: Hey, this is not my beautiful paradigm!

Susan E. Meadows, MLS, Adjunct Assistant Professor, Family and Community Medicine, University of Missouri-Columbia

At MLA '04 Susan spoke at the session titled, Filtering without Fear: The Librarian's Role in Distilling Knowledge and co-taught the MLA CE class, Evidence Based Medicine: Librarian Where Art Thou? Susan is also Library Team Leader of The Family Physicians Inquires Network (FPIN) a consortium of family medicine residency programs and medical libraries devoted to the cultural shift towards evidence-based practice.

A Resource for Every Question: What to Search and When

Roberta Bronson Fitzpatrick, Assistant Director, University of Medicine and Dentistry of New Jersey

Before joining UMDNJ in September 2001, Roberta had been Associate Director for Public Services at New York University's Ehrman Medical Library and held positions at the Weill Cornell Medical Library, Purdue University's Veterinary Medical Library, the University of Florida Health Science Center Library, the Medical College of Wisconsin's Todd Wehr Library, the Columbia University Health Sciences Library, and the Eastern Online Training Center of the National Network of Libraries of Medicine, located at The New York Academy of Medicine.

Roberta is the column editor for "Online Updates: A Column for Search Analysts," published in Medical Reference Services Quarterly and for the "Information Rx" column that appears in the Journal of Electronic Resources in Medical Libraries. She has been active in evidence-based medicine instructional programs, participating as a co-tutor in a course sponsored jointly by the American College of Physicians (ACP), The New York Academy of Medicine, and the National Library of Medicine (NLM), and in clinical librarian programs at Cornell and NYU. She holds BS and MLIS degrees from the University of Wisconsin.

Plenary Sessions

Providing Evidence-Based Public Health Resources: The Librarian's Role

Elaine Martin, Director of Library Services, Principal Investigator, Evidence-Based Practice for Public Health Project, and Director, NN/LM, NER

Hathy Simpson, Project Coordinator, Evidence-Based Practice for Public Health Project and Content Manager, PHPartners.org

Nancy Peterson, Associate Director, New England States Consortium Systems Organization (NESCSO)

Description: This panel will discuss the provision of evidence-based public health resources through three specific projects aimed at the public health workforce: (1) Evidence-Based Practice for Public Health Project, Lamar Soutter Library, University of Massachusetts Medical School; (2) Partners in Information for the Public Health Workforce, PHPartners.org, National Network of Libraries of Medicine, New England Region (NN/LM, NER); and (3) New England States Consortium Systems Organization (NESCSO).

Evidence-based Health Care and Critical Appraisal for Consumer Advocates

US Cochrane Center staff member to be named

Description: The Cochrane Consumer Coalition strives to involve consumers in the development, use and dissemination of best evidence. To this end they have developed a training tool to educate interested consumers about the concept and practice of evidence-based healthcare.

Concurrent Sessions

Blogging and RSS

Jeannine Gluck, Director of the Medical Library at Eastern Connecticut Health Network, and creator of the Hospital Library Advocacy Weblog.

Description: This presentation will cover the basics of weblogs—what they are, how to find them, how to search them & use them to keep yourself informed, how to create your own—as well as WHY you might (or might not) want to start a weblog.

Evidence-Based Practice in Nursing

Jan Glover, Education Services and Reference Librarian at the Cushing/Whitney Medical Library, Yale School of Medicine

Janene Batten, Reference Librarian to the Yale School of Nursing

Description: Don't miss this opportunity to discover the latest information about evidence-based practice in nursing and its role in the issues facing nursing professionals today. Learn tips to enhance your searching skills and innovative ways to teach evidence-based practice techniques. This session will touch on important roles librarians can play in helping nursing professionals keep current and ways to promote EBP within the organization.

Go Local Massachusetts

Sally Gore, Resource Librarian, University of Massachusetts Medical School

Description: “Go Local Massachusetts” is a web-based service that links users of MedlinePlus to up-to-date information about healthcare providers in their local communities. Come hear about some of the challenges faced, obstacles overcome, and rewards experienced as we've taken on this exciting project to better serve the health information needs of residents throughout the Commonwealth.

NIH Roadmap

Regina White, Associate Vice President, Research Administration, Brown University

Description: Hear from the former Director of NIH's Office of Policy for Extramural Research Administration (OPERA) about the NIH vision of a new paradigm for research and collaboration and what it could mean for your institution.

Making the Most of Google

Shane Sher, Technical Computer Specialist at Providence Public Library

Description: Is the Internet useful in everyday life? Is it faster to use the phonebook or go to the computer? Find out in this hour long class where we explore Google and use it to solve real life problems. Explore everything from checking on a flight to finding the latest medical articles.

Post-Program Meetings

ILL Systems Update (Docline / EFTS / QuickDoc) — Mark Goldstein (NN/LM NER), Jola Sliwinski (UCHC, AFTS Administration), Jay Daly (QuickDoc)

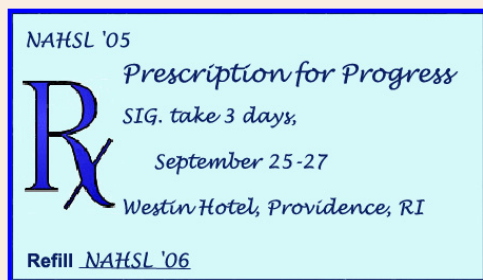

Fireside Chat with the MLA President-Elect Jean Shipman—This very informal session gives you a chance to express your ideas about MLA's directions, your professional needs and to learn about key planned MLA initiatives. Join in the conversation!

LOCKSS — Tom Richardson, New England Journal of Medicine

The LOCKSS Program, using a unique open source system, collects, stores, preserves and provides permanent access to digital content. By using a LOCKSS box, which can be a simple, inexpensive personal computer, libraries can take ownership of licensed or open access digital content. This meeting is open to anyone interested in learning about the LOCKSS Program. Additional information about LOCKSS is available at <http://lockss.stanford.edu>.
